Genoua, Novemb. 20.

THE Spaniſh Gallies, which we told you in our laſt were forced by ill weather to return into this Port, parted from hence again the 14th inſtant, and were met the 16th near Legborne; Dom Beltrom de Guevara General of the Gallies of Sicily ſtay'd here, not being recovered of his late Indiſpoſition. This week arrived in this Port the Cadiz Merchant from Palermo; And ſeveral Dutch Ships from Holland, the latter met on this Coaſt an Algierin of about 20 Guns. The Count de Melgar Governor of Milan is ſtill here, not having yet finiſhed his buſineſs with this Republick.

Venice, Novemb. 16. Great Preparations are making here for the War, and we are aſſured the Republick will have 20000 Men more in their ſervice the next Campagne then they had this laſt. The Count de St. Paul arrived here this week with ſeveral other Officers from the Fleet, who give an account, That the Captain Baſſa had ſent to General Moroſini to propoſe a Treaty of Peace, but that the ſaid General had anſwered, That he had no other Orders than to proſecute the War. We have advice that Manetta a Famous Grecian Pyrate has taken a Turkiſh Gally, in which were 200 Chriſtian Slaves and 79 Turks.

Lemberg, Octob. 24. An Officer, who is come hither from the Army, has given us the following Relation of the late Actions between our Forces and thoſe of the Turks and Tartars. The Poles who were not 20000 fighting Men, having paſſed the Nieſter on a bridge they had made for that purpoſe, advanced into Moldavia, and encamped in a very advantageous place, to expect the coming up of the reſt of the Troops of Lithuania; Some days after the Lieutenant General of Lithuania joyned the Army with 3500 Horſe, upon which the Great General of the Crown held a Council of War, and it was reſolved to march towards the Enemy, who they had advice were preparing a great Convoy at Czecora, which they intended to conduct to Caminiec. The Army marched accordingly, and entred into the Woods and Defilés of Boucovina (which they could not avoyd) and were three days in paſſing them, without receiving any news of the Enemy. The firſt inſtant, being come into a Plain, they diſcovered a great Body of Tartars deſcending from a Hill, who preſently after charged our Van-guard; The Lieutenant General of Lithuania marched with 10 Troops of Horſe to ſupport them, but being overpowered by the Enemies number, was forced to give way; The Prince of Courland advanced very opportunely with 3 Battalions and three pieces of Cannon, upon which they rallied and charged the Enemy together with that vigor, that they obliged them to retire towards the Hill beforementioned. The ſame day the Crown General was informed, that the Turks were marching to joyn the Tartars. He drew up the Army in Battalia the next morning at break of day: The Turks ſoon after appeared, and as their Troops came up formed them into Battalia; The two Armies ſtood in ſight of each other the reſt of the day, and ſome skirmiſhes paſſed between them. The third, the great General underſtood by a Deſerter, that the Seraſquier Soliman intended to fall upon the Chriſtians Right Wing with his whole Force, which he therefore ſtrengthened with ſome Troops from the Main Body; The Turks preſently after began to move and attack our ſaid Wing, but our Huſſars and Infantry maintaining their ground with great courage, and our Artillery, compoſed of 30 pieces of Cannon, playing upon the Enemy, they retired, and then fell upon our main Body, but with the ſame ill ſucceſs; The Tartars charged our left Wing, and with ſome advantage at firſt, but in the concluſion were forced to retire out of the reach of our Cannon. The fourth, the Enemy fired upon us the whole day with the Cannon they had received from Caminiec; And the Crown General cauſed four Redoubts to be raiſed for the ſecurity of our Camp, which were finiſhed the night following, and 12 pieces of Cannon were placed in them; And the 5th at night two other Redoubts were perfected which were more advanced towards the Enemy. The ninth, the Crown General had advice that the Tartars had ſent a great detachement to ſurround them, and to ſhut up the paſſages of the Foreſt, having Commanded 2000 Peaſants to cut down Trees for that purpoſe, that ſo they might not be able to retreat; This Intelligence and the want of Forage made the Poliſh Generals reſolve to Retire, and that they might do it with the more eaſe, they cauſed all the Wagons that were not abſolutely neceſſary to be burnt; In the Evening our Baggage began to march, and before day was got through four the moſt difficult and dangerous paſſages; The Huſſars and the Cavalry followed, except 12 Troops that ſtayd with the Infantry and the Coſſacks in the Rear under the Command of the General of the Artillery and the Prince of Courland. The Turks and Tartars did not perceive our retreat till break of day, when deſcending into the Plain, they charged our Foot before they were entred into the Wood, but the Battalions being well covered with Turn-Pikes and having each two pieces of Cannon at the head of it, they received the Enemy with ſo great a fire that they obliged them to retire; And in the mean time the Horſe paſſing between the Battalions charged the Enemy, and gave the Foot time to enter in good order into the Foreſt. The Turks cauſed their Cannon to advance with extraordinary diligence, and placed them ſo well, that for half an hour they very much incommoded the Chriſtians; And finding a way to paſs a Moraſs which
